Seeing your grades

How are you doing so far? It’s good to check the website to make sure that we have what we are supposed to have. So go back to the course home page, and look in the left column. In the “Navigation” block, there is a link for “Grades.”

The icon for grades is a square depicting a spreadsheet. Click on the word “Grades” and you’ll see how you have done so far. It shows your grades – and no one else’s:
Every course will have a different grade structure. This one is organized into categories: forums, quizzes, and papers. You can see the overall score on each assignment, a percentage score, and the way it totals when weighted according to the importance of the categories. If the instructor has typed comments into the website, you can also see those. You can also see if any scores are missing – that might be something to ask about.
