BI520 New Testament Survey

Short Syllabus

Instructor: Michael Morrison, PhD

Course description

This course gives students an overview of the New Testament documents: the authors, dates, places, genre, structure, and themes. Attention is given to individual documents, and how the documents work together for canonical unity.

To do well in this course, we expect that you will need to spend about 11-12 hours each week, for 12 weeks.

Required textbooks

The New Testament. About 300 pages. Use a modern translation, such as the NRSV, NIV, ESV, or NET. Do not use a paraphrase (e.g., The Message, The New Living Translation, The Voice, etc.).
Please obtain the required textbooks before the class begins – you may need to order them before you register. To find the lowest prices, you may find it helpful to use www.bookfinder.com. ISBN numbers above are linked to bookfinder.

Recommended resources

We recommend a series of introductory paperbacks:

Student learning outcomes

This course serves to support to first GCS student learning objective: Explain the revelation of the Bible in its historical and cultural setting as it relates to God, Jesus Christ, and salvation, and its application for faithful living today. Through this course, students will be able to…

1. describe the circumstances in which each New Testament document was written, as far as is known.

2. trace major themes through the Gospels, epistles, and other writings.

3. describe how the documents are different, yet form a coherent whole.

For more details, see Appendix C.

Requirements and assignments

1. Read the lectures. Lectures will be posted each Monday (or Tuesday, when Monday is a holiday) for the first ten weeks. See the Academic Catalog for study suggestions. You should look up any scripture references in the lectures.
2. Participate. In most courses, part of the learning comes through discussion and interaction with other students. In an online class, this is done through comments posted on a discussion forum. This counts for 10 percent of the final grade. When there is a forum, you should post at least one comment by the end of Thursday, and reply to at least one other student by the end of Sunday.

3. Read the textbooks. They total about 1100 pages, or about 95 pages each week. Most students find that it is best to read 20 or so pages each day, rather than trying to read all 95 pages in one day.

4. Papers. These count for 60 percent of the final grade. We estimate that you will need about 70 hours to work on these papers – an average of 6 hours per week – some weeks more, some weeks less. Much of this work can be done at the same time as you read the New Testament. For a guide to formatting your papers, see “How to Format a GCS Paper,” posted at http://www.gcs.edu/course/view.php?id=23. Also on that page is a Word template document that contains correct page and paragraph settings.

   1) For the first paper, trace a theme through the Synoptic Gospels and Acts, such as the kingdom of God, discipleship, or eating together. This paper is not a string of quotes\(^1\) – it will require some analysis, commentary and synthesis from you. Pick a topic in the first week, and work on your paper each week, as you read Matthew, Mark, Luke and Acts. Seven pages.

   2) The second paper involves tracing a theme through the writings of Paul, John, Hebrews and the General Epistles. This may be the same topic as you used for the first paper, or it may be another, such as the divinity of Jesus, redemption, grace, hope for the future, etc. Seven pages.

5. One final exam. This counts for 30 percent of the final grade.

\(^1\) Quotes should not comprise more than 20 percent of the paper. Quotes are rarely self-explanatory – they need some introduction from you to describe their purpose. All quoted material must be marked with quotes and the source must be noted.
